

SEX, HUGS AND ROCK 'N' ROLL

WHEN MARSHALL O BOY HOSTS A PARTY, YOU CAN BET THERE'S GONNA BE SOME FUCKING GOING ON.

by COLT SPENCER

For the past 12 years, Marshall O Boy has been mixing things up not only as frontman for the rock group Marshall O Boy and the Well Hungarians, but also as host of the notoriously festive, L.A.-based O Boys orgies. Frustrated by the stifling paranoia surrounding AIDS in the early '90s, O Boy decided to loosen things up and "meet, woo and do" every hot, available gay man in town as host of his own safer sex parties. His small gatherings quickly blossomed into full-blown orgies, and taught gay men throughout L.A. how to get in touch with their inner sex pigs—safely and responsibly.

Your original mission was to sleep with every hot, available gay man in L.A. How much longer do you have to go until you've succeeded?

[Laughs] You know, the city keeps growing, so I'm not sure the mission will ever end.

Do you find it's pretty easy to convince guys to participate in group play, or do they need a little bit of coaxing?

Once the clothes start coming off, they either leave or they join in. And they very rarely leave.

What's been the most bizarre thing to happen at one of your orgies?

Well, we're pretty vanilla. Where some people are whips and leather, we blow up giant balloons and play games like Naked Twister. We're weird that way. We don't get too wild because, quite frankly, I never found that pissing on somebody is a nice way to say I love you.

What is sexy to you?

The combination of good looks, being in shape and intelligence.

Does your boyfriend have any issues with your sex piggery?

He participates! [Laughs] But as far as the piggery goes, as I get older, I'm mellowing a bit—I only need three or four guys to keep me happy now.

Tell me what you think sex piggery has to offer gay culture.

It's a way of saying hello, because let's face it, in this community, sex is really just a handshake.
